CONCERNING NOISE.

One of the Most Injurious Influences city Life.

"I can bear the beat very well," said a student forced to spend a summer in the city, "but I can not endure the noise." Possibly he did not stop to consider that, in making such a declaration, he placed himself in illustrious company. Thomas Carlyle "could not abide" a noise, especially that of the morning crowing of cocks. Wallenstein, accustomed as he was to the din of battle, had an unconquerable dread of the barking of dogs, and oven the clatter of the large spurs fashlonable in his day. In order to ensure quiet, he engaged twelve patrols to make regular circuits about his house night and day.

Nother Julius Casar nor the philosopher, Kant, could tolerate the crowing of poor chanticleer, who, indeed, seems to have very few friends among the studious and sensitive.

Schopenhauer exceeds almost all lovers of quiet in the extravagance of his denunciation of noise. He declares that the amount which a man can bear with ease is in inverse ratio to his mental power.

"If I hear a dog barking for hours on the threshold of a bouse," he writes, "I know well enough what kind of brains I may expect from its inhabitants."

A writer in the Popular Science Monthly asserts that noise is one of the most injurious influences of city life. It may not be sufficiently loud to attract the attention of those accustomed to it, but, if continuous, it acts as inevitably upon the nervous system as accustomed to it, but, if continuous, it acts as inevitably upon the nervous system as water in dropping upon a stone.

Experiments made upon animals show that when they have been subjected, for a number of hours, to the vibration of a tuning-fork, their nerve centers became irritated, as certainly as muscular fibers would be affected by an acid or an electric shock.

The injurious effect of ordinary noise has been recognised by the authorities of European cities, and, in some cases, the nuisance has been suppressed. Heavily laden carts are not admitted to certain streets of Berlin, and in others they are only allowed to pass on condition that the horses walk. The street-cars of Munich have no balls and those of us who lives in please. bells, and those of us who live in places where these bells are not used on Sunday can testify to the relief attendant on the consequent "peace and quiet."

The amount of the matter seems to be that the city dweller must regard noise as one of the necessary evils of his condition— one to be borne philosophically, and requirone to be borne philosophically, and requiring a large stock of grace and patience. Happy, indeed, are they who, through the long, hot months, are only disturbed in their morning slumbers by the song of the birds,

WOMEN AS COLLECTORS.

A New Avenue of Employment Opened to the Weaker Sex.

The avenues of employment for women are coustantly increasing. Already she has proved herself a good clerk, a good book-keeper and a good type-writer, and the latest is a female collector. At least a dozen houses in Kansas City are employing women in this capacity, and their number seems to be constantly increasing.

A woman may be a book-keeper or a type-writer and yet be the most feminine creature imaginable, despite her business relations, says the Kansas City Stor, but the female dunner would seem to be another kind of business woman, and she brings forward very promptly the question of how much distinction must be made between a woman and a man in the same business. One thing is certain, one can not kiek a lady collector out of the office.

The female collectors are for the most part young women, and, according to their employers, they are as persistent and as successful in their business as men. Their mode of operation, however, is somewhat peculiar, and they do not seem to go about the collection of a bill the same way as a man. A reporter happened in an office yesterday where fifteen or twenty young men terday where fifteen or twenty young men were working. While he was talking with the manager a well-dressed young woman walked in and inquired for one of the young men. He was pointed out to her, and while the whole office watched her she walked over to his desk and began a conversation with him in a tone so low no one could hear. After talking for a few moments she turned to go, and raising her voice, said:

"If you don't come in and settle I'll be around again on Saturday."

When she was gone the young man came in for an unmerciful guying, and it is safe to say he made a desperate effort to pay the bill before Saturday. She was the collector for a jewelry firm. for a jewelry firm.

A merchant who has adopted the new scheme was asked about it, and said: "I find that my lady collector is persistent, faithful and trustworthy, and has great success in making some very bad collections, and I don't see why a lady should not be permitted to ask for the payment of a bill if she can do almost every thing else about an office."

BECAUSE The greatest writers of the world like to have their work read by the greatest number, and therefore to such a magazine as THE CENTURY the best naturally comes. It was for THE CENTURY that General Grant first wrote his reminiscenses of important battles.

BECAUSE It is publishing the life of private secretaries. Of this it has been said. The young man who is not reading it robs himself of that which he will hunger for." The coming year presents the most important part of this great history, which may begin at any time.

BECAUSE It is printing those remarkathe Able articles on "Siberia and the Excile System," by George Kenman, which are attracting universal attention and are being reprinted in hundreds of foreign newspapers, but are not allowed to enter Russia. The "Chicago Tribune" says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." They are "as judicial as the opinion of a Supreme Court tribunal—as thrilling as the most sensational drama."

BECAUSE During 1889 THE CENTURY is to have a series of engravings of the greatest pictures of the old Italian masters, made by Timothy Cole, the leading wood-engraver in the world, who has spent lour years in Italy on this work; a series of "Straoge True Stories of Louisiana," by Geo. Mr. Beck asked for the resolution to be he asked whether any assemblyman or any one else had ever seen such a bill or anything in the form of such a bill of this character coming from him. The truth of the matter is simply this: Mr. Beck introduced a resolution enquiring into the advisability of reducing the salaries of State officers, there being no amount stated and no provisions for reduction, further than an inquiry. The committee to whom the Resolution was referred, after due consideration, might conclude to raise the salaries instead of lower them. New York, Jan. 9 .- The Su Court rendered a decision against the sugar trust. The suit was brought by the State against the North River Sugar Refining Company to forfeit its Sugar Refining Company to forfeit Its charter, on the ground that it virtually passed out of existence by selling out all stock to the sugar trust and closing up its works.

The action was begun by Attorney General Tabar for a forpeiture and dissolution of the charter of the North Rivers Sugar Refining Co., on the ground that it had exceeded its powers and franchises in becoming a member of the sugar trust. Judge Barretts opinion was most exhaustive, and probably the most important ever written upon the subject of trusts and monopolies. The Judge summoned the counsel of both sides before him, and a jury whose duty it was to merely formally render a verdict in accor-dance with the decision of the court. Defendants counsel took exceptions to the ruling.

Judge Barrett says: "It did not require the astute mind that prepared this most original instrument to perceive that an aggregation of partner-ship with the dangers resulting from death and the exercise of individual power could never effect a safe and permanent cohesion. Accordingly we find, as one of the first provisions of ed, and the cases of the so called trust, the siructure and condi-tion in substance that the partnership shall all be turned into a corporation. This, in fact, was done, and thus several of these corporations were organized for the express purpose of recreating the various shares of capital stock through which a combination was to be formed. The partners took on a corporation garb, became shareholders, and as such, fitted themselves to enter combination within the terms of

A Level Headed Governor. Washington, Jan. 9,-West, appointed Governor of Utah by Presiton Saturday night and intends to appear before the House Committee on Territories on Wednesday to oppose the admission of Utah as a State. This sentiment, he says, is shared by nearly every non-Mormon or Gentile in the Territory. West places his objec-tion on the broad ground that the Mormons are unfitted to exercise the rights of citizenship. Governor West said: "To give these people the sov-ereign rights proposed would be to place every non-Mormon in Utah completely at their mercy. Under a Territorial form of Government we are protected by Congress and the executive, but to confer the right of Statehood upon Utah, the Mormons would frame a constitution and laws so un just and arbitrary in their character that an outsider could not live with them, Hence I say all non-Mormons in the Territory, without regard to par-ties, oppose the proposition of State-hood."

"What do you propose as a substicommission, acting in conjunction with the Governor, which would control all appointments, would answer our purpose exactly, and Utah would enter upon an era of prosperity such as no other Territory has ever known."

Good Play Well Presented Last The presentation last evening reat not often enjoyed by Nevada theater-goers. J. R. Grismer and Phœbe Davies were always favorites in Reno, but last night's entertainment intensified the kind feeling hitherto felt for these favorites. Mr. Grismer as James Carlton, fully sustained his well earned reputation, and Phœbe Davies as Madge Carlton, captured the audience at once and held them entranced throughout the whole five acts. Edgar Weir as Gilbert Blair, proved himself a most accomplished villain, and F. M. Page as Simon Clegg, was faultless. Frank Miss and Miss Jennie tained his well earned reputation, and Simon Clegg, was faultless. Frank Hatch as Bob Millet, and Mis Jennie Cleveland as Sally and Liz, could not have been better. Miss Fannie Brown have been better. Miss Fannie Brown as Med, was a rare impersonation of a rolicking, good natured and wide awake boy, whose fidelity to the proprietors or the punch and judy show people, as well as to Madge Carlton and little Lucy, captured everybody. On the whole the play was intensely interesting and admirably presented.

Valuable Information

Section 1. Article 1-C. W. Booton, of the Opera House Dry Goods Store, begs leave to call the attention of the public to bear in mind that he has put in a fine and well selected stock of boots and shoes made by the famous Nolan Brothers, of San Francisco. The quality of this firms make is too well known to need any comment, also my stock of ready made clothing is second to none now in this city for quality and reasonable prices; good suits for men from $6 50 per suit up; boys suits from $2 50 per suit up.

Section 2. Article1-Any intelligent community, especially such as resides in Reno, were tired and disgusted long ago of reading advertisements quoting prices reduced from so and so to so and so,; for instance, you see advertised to-day in the papers a corset reduced from $1 to 55cts,; now there must be something wrong, to charge 'The World Against Her," was a ladies $1 for a corset for some time, then reduce it to 55cts. I sell the same corset for 50cts, in all sizes and never asked any more, as it is my regular price Article 2-In this mornings paper may also be seen a description of ladies cloth 36 inches wide selling for 25cts per yard, all ladies who are at all posted, know there is no such thing as a ladies cloth 36 inches wide, if perchance there may be such a thing in the cata-there may be such a thing in the catagory dry goods, out of respect to the ladies, I would not advertise it for sale for I know it would not give satisfaction; see my all wool fine quality of TRECOT dress goods all shades, for 40cts sold everywhere for 75cts per yard.

Section 3. Article 1—I sell white merino vests for 35cts each, all sizes, which is my regular price. I sell hemstitched, colored bordered, handkerchiefs for 4cts each and make no blow chiefs for 4cts each and make no blow about it like our cotemporary who sells them for 5cts each. I sell a nice black jersey for 50cts which is the regular price, it is not reduced from $1 as some would have you to believe. I sell a pure linen damask towel with fancy designs on center and fancy border. This towel is 40 inches long, and I not as I advertise it, I will charge nothing for it. Call and see it. Section 4. Article 1—Please note again, you see advertised frequently RHADAMES reduced from $2 to $1 25 this is a repetition of section 2, article 1, you will see there is a profit of 75cts per yard taken off which is an enormous profit and as no one sells goods for cost, even then, at $1 25 per yard, there must be still a profit. Now I sell good rhadames for $1 yer yard, which I suppose other merchants sell which I suppose other merchants sell for $2 per yard.

Section 4. Article 1—I sell an excellent quality of black silk for $1 per yard. The ladies frequently tell me they paid $2 per vard for the same article down street, I don't doubt it in the least; but the time has arrived when high prices will reign no longer in Reno on dry goods, boots and shoes and clothing, and the amount of goods I turn out daily is a sufficient guarantee that the people of Reno appreciate a one price cash store, all goods marked in plain figures. Respectfully,

LOVE AND BALLOONING.

Escaping One Peril Only to Wilfully Encounter Another.

"No," said the scientist, reflectively, to a bevy of girls who were watching the infla-tion of a monster balloon, in which a daring "Champion of Aerial Navigation" was to ascend to a great altitude, and descend by means of a parachute. "No; neither are of modern invention."

"Who first thought of them?" queried Belle Chalmers, a saucy, black-eyed lass, who delighted in "poking fun" at the graynired old student. "The Montgolfier brothers, of Lyons, France, are entitled to the honor of a first success, though," with a merry twinkle in his eyes, "it is recorded that one Icarus, son of Dædalus—"

"What horrid names!" "Incurred the anger of Mines, King of Crete, and to escape his vengeance, fastened a pair of wings upon his shoulders with-hum, perhaps beeswax, and flew away."

"Then he is entitled to the honor and not the Mont-something brothers."
"Scarcely, for he came to grief. Venturing too near the sun, the adhesive preparation melted, and Icarus came tumbling down through space."

"And was killed!" sympathetically.
"Unquestionably," sarcastically.
"I never heard of it before, professor

"Very likely, as it happened about 1425 B. C.," replied the old man, with a dry cough. Then he continued: "In 1797 one Andrew Jacques Garnerin in Paris descended some 6,000 feet by means of parachute." 'Alive, professor?" "Yes, but upon trying it again was maimed for life. The next attempt was by one Robert Crocker at Vauxhail Garden, London, in 1887." "Did he succeed?"

"In being dashed to pieces. By the way, Miss Curiosity, the verdict of the coroner's jury in the case was curious," and he read from a book filled with memorands:

We find that the deceased, Robert Crocker, came to his death casually, and by Crocker, came to his death casually, and by misfortune, in consequence of receiving divers severe injuries upon the earth in fall-ing from a parachute of his own invention and contrivance, appended to a balloon, and we further add that the parachute was moving toward the death of the deceased, and is therefore deedand and forfeit to the Oneen." into stores and passed $55 checks at

"Please don't indulge in any scientific jargon," exclaimed Belle, holding up her dainty hands as to ward off an avalanche of hig words. "The verdict came very near killing me, and a learned explanation would complete the murder."
"Well, then, Miss Ignorance, he goes up

"Probably, but you wouldn't fall so fast, young lady."

"Why!" with questioning eyes as well as ropes, with a gaping crowd watching the fascening of trapeze bar and parachute. The arrangements were superintended by a somewhat fine and determined-looking young man, who soon became known as the daring aeronaut. With Belle Chalmers he was evidently well acquainted, for he lin-gered by her side, chatted familiarly, and her maing color told that his words night have a deeper interest for her than others understood. The dry cold weather of the early "No, Miss Chalmers," he said, is snewer to a question, "danger has been reduced to a minimum. Study and experimental science have become its master. At least while flying through the air there is sittle to fear, and about all one has to guard against

"It must be glorious, must be a thrilling sensation, to become as a hird," she said, glowing with enthusiasm.

"Yes, it is an almost breathless swing, and—" he hesitated. Then seeing that her and—" he hestated. Then seeing that her companions had passed beyond hearing, he continued: "It would be the crowning glory of my life, Belle, to have you with me for love-making."

"If I can."
The difficulty Belle had in gaining the consent of her parents ("old fogies," she disrespectfully called them) to making "such an exhibition of herself," even her most intimate girl friends knew nothing about. And though there was great comment when the fact was learned that she was "going up in a balloon," yet all agreed that she looked—the mon "divine," and the unenvious of the girls "just too lovely for any thing," when she appeared.

when she appeared.

As to dress she wore a Bloomer costume of blue cloth, daintily fashioned, and edged and braided with white braid, with her black curls hanging loosely from under a jaunty little cap and long white plume, her cheeks as Jacquiminot roses, and her twinkling as stars.

Had she been anticipating the trip for months, she could not have been better prepared. At least the lover thought so, but gave no expression to his surprise beyond lifting his eyebrows and a peculiar smile, which Bolle answered by a saucy elevation of nose naturally and decidedly retrousse.

With every thing ready she stepared into

With every thing ready she stepped into the basket of the balloon, cheered by the waiting hundreds, and soared as some monster bird, not far from one who was ac tomed to be lost among the clouds, but very high for one who never before had ventured to thus leave the earth.

"It is grand! It is glorious, this freedom of motion and breath!" she exclaimed, in the fullness of her happiness.

"And gives you, Belle, a trifle of the feeling one has at an altitude where every thing you now see is lost to the eye; when breath ing is difficult and the brain becomes dizzy. "I would not dare to go higher. As it is I am awed, nay, my very soul shrinks in a realization of the infinite, as 1 never dreamed of before."

"We will not go higher. As long as you please we will drift about here, then deseeud."

"What if an accident should happen! Oh, if the rope should break and we shoot upward!" and he felt the hand resting within his tremble, and suddenly become

"No danger of that," he answered, with a re-assuring smile. "But probably we had better descend. You are becoming too nervous; too much terrified for enjoyment.' "Wait yet a little. It is an

"I remember well when I felt as you do,

Belle, though it is commonplace and—" "Merciful Heaven! what does this sudden shooting up, this outcry, mean?" and the roses of her cheeks were blanched with horror.

He knew but too well, needed not to be told that the balloon had become loosened. And knowing as well that the life he loved more than his own hung upon prompt ac-tion, he was not slow of decision. "Belle," he said, taking both of her hands within his own, "you are a brave girl, and must do as I direct, or Heaven alone knows what the consequence will be."

"What must I do!" was questioned in boarse, strained voice. "Must descend my means of a parachute "I can not—can not. Rather would I die with you."

At another time such a confession would have been the sweetest of earth. Now it nearly drove him to madness. Yet still seeping command of himself, he answered "Keep up your courage, little girl, and all will be well. Grasp the handles thus, and in an instant you will be in the arms waiting to receive you." The parachute was ready. He had secured The paractute was ready. He had secured her against falling by fastening her to it with a rope, knotted around her waist; had opened the valves and permitted the gas to escape and the balloon to fall as low as possible, without endangering the glossy silken folds. Then drawing her to him he kissed the girl again and again, told her there was no danger and realizing it to be there was no danger, and realizing it to be her only chance, launched her into the air. Against tears and entreaties, with force that could scarcely be called gentle, it was done, and as she shot down, he felt that his heart went with her, and that if any thing serious happened to her it would break.

Those below saw the coming as of an immense blue bird and cage; at first very fast; then slower. With open arms they waited; with swiftly-beating pulses they reached upward, and when. Belle Chalmers. came within reach she was quickly seized upon, and, half fainting, she was carrie

It was a mighty shout that went up whe she was rescued, and no ears welcomed it more gladly than those of the True, his own life was in danger, but what of that? Had death stared him in the fac he would have rejoiced, and, whirled inadly along as he was, the light of happiness faded not from his eyes or the smile from

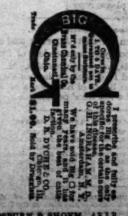

She was safe—that was enough. No very far from it. With the knowledge came the desire stronger than ever before to hve for her, to live with her, and instantly be did all possible to that end. It was no cast task. The balloon had not been prepar for such a fight, but coolness, daring and for such a fight, but coolness, daring and science at last triumphed. He came down uninjured, though the balloon was saily rent. Little, however, he gave thought to that, when a few hours later he sat by the girl of his heart, with the trials thro. a which they had passed making each a thousand fold more dear to the other.

"So he is safe," was the comment of one of the bright-eyed girls who had listened to the learned disquisition of the professor.
